Nine Students Named National Merit Semifinalists at Wyoming High School

Cincinnati – Today the National Merit Scholarship Corporation announced its annual list of National Merit Semifinalists, recognizing nine seniors at Wyoming High School. National Merit Semifinalists represent the top one percent of PSAT test takers in Ohio. There were only 616 semifinalists in Ohio and 13 public high schools in Cincinnati have students named semifinalists this year.

The students who were named National Merit Semifinalists from Wyoming are: Rebecca Denson, Thomas Dickson, Olivia Linn, Zachary Lower, Remington Pool, Anna Ross, Jonathon Rutter, Carson Skidmore and Samuel White.

"All of these students deserve a tremendous amount of credit for their commitment to learning. National Merit is just another way that our students are recognized," said Aaron Marshall, Wyoming High School principal. "The students' success, though, does not happen in isolation. Dedicated teachers and highly supportive parents work together to foster ongoing student success."

The National Merit Scholarship Corporation annually honors students who achieve high academic success and demonstrate leadership capabilities. National Merit Semifinalists represent 16,000 students nationwide, or one-third of the 50,000 students who receive high scores on the PSAT. National Merit Commended and National Achievement students will be announced later this month. All of the Wyoming High School students who receive recognition from the National Merit Corporation will be honored before the start of the Wyoming Cowboys football game on October 25.
